DOJ,

When someone breaks the law, their penalties are determined by the legal system. Why is it that Microsoft has been proven guilty, but then invited to determine their own punishment. Simply telling the public that Microsoft will behave from now on is ludicrous. If someone commits murder or kidnaps someone, they are not allowed to simply promise that they won't do it again. They pay for what they have done. You are not punishing Microsoft for what they have done. The about face has to mean that many of you have had your pockets lined by Microsoft. I think you are behaving in a disgusting manner. This is not surprising in such a corrupt administration.
